AT THE KING OPERA HOUSE.

The Squaw Man Will be Here Next Thursday.

Barley has a dramatic success in bringing the breezy western life of the early eighties to the stage as the Squaw Man, which will be presented here next Thursday. The theatergoer of the present day—be he a resident of the east or west, has but faint conception of the incident attached to the popular "squaw man." To call a white man that, out West, is as dead as an arrow as to design a cow punch as a "sheep herder" or a "ranger"—it means fight. Yet, were it not for the "squaw man" western civilization would not have reached the high plane it now occupies. Running over the list of great plainmen, it will be found that Kit Carson, "Trapper" Jack, Jack Hardy, Jim Stowell, Col. Parker and other men whose names are indelibly engraved on the pages of the history of the West, all took squaws as wives. Later on, the disservice came, for the simple reason that hundreds of white men, worth less beyond description, married Indian women for the purpose of securing six hundred and forty acres of land, beef, flour and the regular issues of annuity goods given by a philanthropic government. Visit any of the great reservations today, and you will find that the whites surrounding the tract have nothing whatever to do with a "squaw man," and the Indians treat him with absolute contempt. One exception to this rule, is a man on the Big reservation, "Henderson" by name, who claims to be related to one of the wealthiest families in America. He is about sixty-five years of age and has lived with the Indians for over forty years. It was just about this time that a brilliant young society man dropped out of view in New York and has never been seen since. It is said that Mr. Royle gained his inspiration for the story of "The Squaw Man" from the story of Henderson.

A WARM ROOM

is the greatest comfort of anything, and it's an easy matter to have one when you have a Diamond Hot Blast stove in it. These are the cleanest, most convenient stove imaginable, they burn soft or hard coal, and they consume every bit of it too, thereby consuming less fuel than any other kind of stove. They retain their heat and will keep any ordinary size room warm for a long period of time with less fuel. We are sole agent in Greenville for these Diamond stoves and the many who have placed in homes within the past few weeks should be sufficient proof that they are all we claim them to be. We have many sizes and styles now on display, beautiful trimmings, fancy tops and legs. We are anxious to put one of these stoves in your home at once before the blast of winter reaches us. Treat its merits and if it does not prove satisfactory we will refund your money. We have large sizes for the double rooms or reception halls, the medium rooms, before you decide on any style we want you to at least see what we offer.
